

chloe's olive hummus

2 cups

One 15-ounce can garbanzo beans (chickpeas), rinsed and drained

¼ cup pitted green
olives

1 small garlic clove

¼ cup pitted Kalamata
olives

¼ cup olive oil

2 tablespoons tahini

3 tablespoons lemon
juice

1 tablespoon balsamic
vinegar

¼ teaspoon salt

OPTIONAL ACCOMPANIMENTS

Cut-up vegetables
such as bell peppers,
carrots, celery,
cauliflower, cucumber,
and sugar snap peas,
or pita chips or tortilla
chips

There have been times I thought Chloe might explode from eating too many olives. No joke. On several occasions our babysitter has turned helplessly to me and said, “She won’t stop eating them!” as Chloe downed one after another and screamed, “More olives!”

The olives Chloe likes have quite a bitter flavor, a taste most kids might turn their noses up at, but my girl loves them. So in honor of Chloe, I made this olive hummus. When mixed with the protein-packed garbanzo beans and tahini and pureed into a smooth spread, there’s no bitterness whatsoever and you have a dip that’s delish on crackers and fresh veggies, as a sandwich spread, and even straight out of the bowl with a spoon, as Chloe demonstrated so well to me. Without exploding.

1. Place all the ingredients into a food processor and puree.
2. Serve. The hummus will keep in the fridge for up to 1 week.

