

Pink grapefruit terrine

The sweet-tart taste of citrus is refreshing at the end of a meal. I use unflavored gelatin to thicken the grapefruit juice, flavor it with honey and mint, and combine it with grapefruit sections in custard cups. The quick sauce is made of orange marmalade thinned with orange juice and Grand Marnier.

🍷 4 servings

Peel the grapefruits with a sharp paring knife, cutting closely all around the flesh, removing the skin and white pith. Then cut on either side of each grapefruit segment, remove the segments from the membranes, and put the segments in a bowl. Hold the membranes over a small saucepan and squeeze them to extract the juice. (You should have about 24 grapefruit segments and $\frac{3}{4}$ cup juice.)

Alternatively, peel off the outer skin and pith and separate the fruit into ordinary segments. Place the store-bought juice in a small saucepan.

Divide the segments among 4 custard cups with a $\frac{3}{4}$ -cup capacity, arranging about 6 in each.

Sprinkle the gelatin over the juice in the pan. Heat over low heat, stirring occasionally, until the gelatin has melted. Add the honey and grenadine and stir well. Mix in the shredded mint leaves and pour the mixture over the grapefruit segments, dividing it evenly. Cover, and refrigerate for at least 3 to 4 hours, or overnight.

Meanwhile, for the orange sauce: Stir the marmalade, Grand Marnier, and orange juice together in a small bowl.

At serving time, dip the bottom of the cups briefly into hot water, then invert them and unmold the desserts onto individual plates. Coat each dessert with a few spoonfuls of the sauce and serve.

- 2 pink grapefruits
(1-1 $\frac{1}{4}$ pounds each)
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup store-bought grapefruit juice (if you choose the alternative method and don't remove the grapefruit segments from their membranes)
- 2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
(about 1 envelope)
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1 tablespoon grenadine syrup
- 1 tablespoon shredded
peppermint or spearmint
leaves

Orange sauce

- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup orange marmalade
- 2 tablespoons Grand Marnier
- 2 tablespoons orange juice

← MAKE AHEAD

You do need to plan ahead for this dessert. Make it in the morning or the day before.

